Please join us for the
4th Annual
Southern Obesity Summit

September 12-14, 2010

JW Marriott Buckhead
Atlanta, Georgia

The 2010 Southern Obesity Summit will convene 16 southern states to:

- Promote cross-sector collaboration
- Provide opportunities for practitioners to share successful policy and community-based intervention strategies
- Define a Southern Strategy to encourage effective inner-state initiatives and collaboration

Please visit www.SouthernObesitySummit.org to register.

We are also developing a Southern Obesity Strategy! Tell us what you are doing to prevent obesity - please complete our survey at <http://ims2.missouri.edu/SOS/>.

What are you doing to prevent obesity? We want to know!

You are doing great work to prevent and reduce obesity in your community – Tell us about it! We need your help to develop a Southern Obesity Strategy. We envision this Strategy becoming a systematic way for individuals and organizations from the south to connect in a peer network focused around common themes and ideas. The Southern Obesity Strategy does not differ from IOM, CDC, RWJF or Let's Move recommendations; in fact, it uses the CDC's Media, Access, Point of Decision Information, Price, and Social Support & Services (MAPPS) intervention framework to categorize initiatives in the south.

Please tell us what you are doing to prevent and reduce obesity in your community. Complete this short survey – <http://ims2.missouri.edu/SOS/> - by August 20, 2010, and be part of the foundation for the Southern Obesity Strategy. This survey will collect information on the active obesity initiatives at the community level in the 16 states that will be represented at the Southern Obesity Summit (SOS) in Atlanta from September 12-14. All SOS participants and others who complete the survey will receive summaries of the active initiatives in each state as well as access to information online prior to coming to the Summit. At the 2010 Summit, we will start the conference by presenting the results of this survey. Throughout the event, participants will use its results, especially during sessions where we build the future structure for collaborating between the southern states. On November 1, a report of the survey results and our planned activities will be presented to First Lady Michelle Obama.

Thank you for being part of this region of the country – and thank you for working so hard to make a difference. Please help us spread the word about this important survey!

4th Annual Southern Obesity Summit

We also invite you to join us for the 4th Annual Southern Obesity Summit in Atlanta, Georgia, taking place from September 12-14. This innovative conference will focus on childhood and adult obesity prevention in the southern United States, the most obese region in the nation. Teams from 16 southern states, comprising more than 300 participants will convene to promote cross-sector collaboration and partnerships to prevent obesity, share successful policy and community-based intervention strategies, and connect with peer practitioners and leaders to promote, coordinate, and sustain innovative obesity prevention activities. For more information and to register for the Summit, please visit www.southernobesitysummit.org.

Alliance for a Healthier Generation Honors 179 U.S. Schools for Combating Childhood Obesity

The Alliance for a Healthier Generation, founded by the American Heart Association and the William J. Clinton Foundation, recognized 179 schools who have transformed their campuses into healthier places for students and staff. Each has distinguished itself with policies that meet or exceed stringent standards set by the Alliance's Healthy Schools Program.

President Bill Clinton, American Heart Association Chairman Neil Meltzer, and Robert Wood Johnson Foundation President and CEO Dr. Risa Lavizzo-Mourey honored the schools during an event in New York City.

One of the country's most extensive childhood obesity prevention efforts, schools that are part of the Healthy Schools Program are making significant changes in the areas of healthy eating, physical activity and staff wellness to help tomorrow's generation be healthier.

It takes time, persistence and dedication to create and sustain any change, which is why the Healthy Schools Program focuses on gradual, systemic changes to the school environment. The 179 nationally recognized schools being celebrated prove that it is possible to change the culture of a school when staff, students and parents lead the charge.

Learn more about these schools' healthy achievements and how you can get involved at HealthierGeneration.org.

Calling All “Heroes”: Georgia Youth Invited to Join the Movement to Fight Childhood Obesity

- “UnitedHealth HEROES” grants support local programs that engage children as learners and leaders of healthy habits
- Community-focused, service-learning initiative by UnitedHealth Group and Youth Service America

NORCROSS, Ga. (Aug. 3, 2010) – Children and youth across Georgia have the opportunity to become “Health Heroes” by learning about childhood obesity, designing programs to address it and implementing the programs in their communities.

UnitedHealth HEROES is a service-learning, health literacy initiative designed to encourage young people, working with educators and youth leaders, to create and implement local hands-on programs to fight childhood obesity. As childhood obesity rates are increasing, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, UnitedHealth Group (NYSE: UNH) is taking the fight to Georgia and offering UnitedHealth HEROES grants to schools and youth-focused, community center-based programs.

Grants of up to $1,000 will be awarded to programs that demonstrate a clear understanding of the health risks associated with childhood obesity; propose creative solutions to fighting obesity in their schools and communities; and can be easily implemented, scaled and measured. In addition, each grant also engages participating youth in service-learning, an effective teaching and learning strategy that supports student academic achievement, and helps students develop their workplace readiness skills.

To obtain an application, visit www.YSA.org/HEROES. The website also contains more information about the program as well as “First Responders: Youth Addressing Childhood Obesity Through Service-Learning,” a step-by-step manual that helps youth, parents, teachers and other volunteers deploy YSA service-learning models to fight childhood obesity in their communities. Applications must be submitted online before midnight, Oct. 22, 2010. Grant recipients will be notified in December and January.

“With the UnitedHealth HEROES program, we are helping young people take action to improve their overall health and quality of life in a way that’s not only educational, but beneficial for their communities. We believe that as people become more aware of health issues through health literacy and advocacy initiatives they will make positive changes to live better lives,” said Rick Elliott, CEO, UnitedHealthcare of Georgia. “We look forward to seeing the creative ideas young people come up with to help fight obesity and encourage healthier living.”

UnitedHealth Group is partnering with Youth Service America (YSA) to launch the third year of the UnitedHealth HEROES program. Research by Denver-based RMC Research Corp. has shown that young people who participate in service-learning programs improve their academic performance and critical-thinking skills, increase their confidence and sense of potential, and accept leadership roles.

“Childhood obesity is one of the greatest health issues facing children and youth in the U.S.,” said Steve Culbertson, YSA president and CEO. “UnitedHealth HEROES provides young people with the important responsibility of seeking solutions to this epidemic, and I’m thrilled to see the innovative ideas used to educate and engage their peers.”

To date, UnitedHealth Group has awarded 361 HEROES grants to schools and community organizations across the country. Earlier this year, more than 20,000 children and youth logged over 436,000 volunteer hours serving more than 100,000 people in their communities to help reduce childhood obesity. A list of previous grant winners is available at www.ysa.org.

UnitedHealth HEROES grant recipients will have the opportunity to showcase their projects on YSA’s 22nd Annual Global Youth Service Day (GYSD), April 15-17, 2011. GYSD provides an opportunity for students to include their projects in a larger, global youth service movement that seeks to improve communities in all 50 states and more than 100 countries.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one in three children is obese or overweight, putting them on the road to lifelong chronic conditions like diabetes and heart disease. In Georgia, about 37.3 percent of children ages 10 to 17 are considered overweight or obese. If left unchecked or untreated, obesity will affect 43 percent of adults by 2018, according to the 2009 America’s Health Rankings™, and will add nearly $344 billion in that year alone to the nation’s annual direct health care costs, accounting for more than 21 percent of health care spending.

About Youth Service America

Leadership Development Conference in DC

by Stephanye Peek

The 55th AAHPERD Leadership Development Conference was held on June 16-19, 2010 at Washington Court Hotel in Washington, D.C. Our GAHPERD representatives that were honored to attend the conference were David Worrall, President-Elect; Gina Zuganelis, Vice President-Health and Advocacy; Jacque Harbison, Executive Director and Stephanye Peek, President.

On Wednesday night David, Jacque, Gina and I attended the Southern District AHPERD Representatives Dinner at the Sequoia Restaurant on the Potomac River. Our AAHPERD President, Vicki Worrell joined our dinner and we had a great time of delicious food and fun fellowship.

David, Gina and I visited the "Hill" on Thursday, June 17 to share promoting fitness and good health in all our schools across Georgia. We appreciated having the opportunity to share our passion of keeping kids fit for though Physical Education and Health to help fight childhood obesity by talking with several of our Georgia Senators, Representatives and their staff. They were Senator Saxby Chambliss; Senator Johnny Isakson; Representative Phil Gingrey and Representative Jim Marshall (who is an avid runner) We were honored to have a photo opportunity with the staff photographers of Saxby Chambliss; Johnny Isakson and Phil Gingrey. (Thanks David for making those arrangements for us) I had one of Jim Marshall's staff team to take a picture with my camera. Special thanks to our Georgia Senators and Representatives who took time out of their busy schedule with all the talk of the "oil spill in the Gulf" to realize the importance of Physical Education and Health in the schools!

Gina and I served as ELF's in DC (Emerging Forum Leaders), we attend ELF Rookie Camp; ELF Contract Signing-designing our personal mission statement; AAHPERD 101; "Good listeners are good teachers" and game planning for progress and more. We felt very informed and had a great time of sharing with other ELF's across the United States.

We were honored to meet Paul Roetert, our new AAHPERD CEO. He spoke at the dinner on Thursday night and shared many outstanding stories that kept us all very attentive, and we saw were he has a passion for making AAHPERD better and stronger than ever. We are excited about our new leadership and sent best wishes to Mike in his retirement from AAHPERD.

On Friday Night there were many activities to chose from such as sightseeing in DC; Kennedy Center Theater and Nationals Baseball Game. Gina, Jacque, David and I attended the Nationals Baseball Game and watched Strasbourg throw 10 strikeouts. We even wore Nationals T-shirt with Strasbourg on the back, even as avid Braves fans, we were Nationals fans for the night!

On Saturday, David received his Varsity Letter at the ceremony of completion of Leadership Development Conference as a President-Elect. Thanks again GAHPERD for giving us the opportunity to represent Georgia in DC.

Choice or Chance: What's in Your Professional Future?

Mid April, more than 60 of our professional colleagues converged on Capital Hill to advocate for physical education. A week later, the House passed a version of the FIT Kids Act, which promises to refocus attention back onto public school physical education. In his supporting remarks on the House floor, Bill sponsor Ron Kind

(D-WI) stated that children need to be “taught at an early age the benefits of active, healthy lifestyles.”

On Thursday, celebrity fitness activist Richard Simmons joined U.S. Reps. Kind (D-WI), Wamp (R-TN), Miller (D-CA), representatives from the American Heart Association, the Sporting Goods Manufacturing Association, and the National Association for Sport and Physical Education, to celebrate this success at a press event outside the House.

In an era of all too-frequent bad news about physical education program and position cuts, this success story is long overdue. Sadly, the event also highlights the extent to which the vast majority of American physical educators are willing to leave their professional futures to chance.

Simmons has for some time led a PE crusade. He's testified in Congress on the importance of school physical education, held a PE Rally in DC, and given numerous media interviews. But how long will he keep this going? When he stops, what then? Do we hope that the Heart Association or Sporting Goods Manufacturers will continue advocating on our behalf?

Less than half of the 50 States were represented at NASPE's SPEAK Out Day. Those who were, included Bob and Jill Fox, owners of Speed Stacks, Kymm Ballard from SPARK, Suzanne Sullivan from ING Financial Services, Beth Kirkpatrick from Polar, Cindy Sisson from Hop Sports, and others outside-the-teaching-profession PE supporters, such as Demeka Cage from Louisiana who heard about the event from the Alliance for a Healthier Generation.

Physical educators numbered around 40. Teachers were from around the country, and many had taken unpaid leave from their schools and colleges and spent their own money to advocate on behalf of approximately 300,000 teaching colleagues. In total that's a little over a hundredth of one percent of the nation's physical education teaching community.

Okay, not all of us can or want to go to Washington to promote our profession. And we don't need to. We have a remarkably effective, but unfortunately not full time, Government Relations Manager in Megan Wolfe at NASPE. For SPEAK Out Day, Megan and NASPE staff painstakingly scheduled hundreds of appointments with legislators, created materials, then trained this volunteer task force how best to deliver their PE message on the Hill. It was a great event and passing the FIT Kids Act in the House was a huge success. But the hard truth is that as a teaching community we are perennial underperformers in supporting our profession.

What is puzzling is why more of those who teach physical education apparently see no merit in supporting the profession they depend upon for their livelihood. Too many of us are happy to accept the fruits of other people's PE advocacy, but ignore any responsibility for earning it. As teachers and coaches we preach fair play: But we don't practice it ourselves.

Choice or Chance: What's in Your Professional Future? (continued)

Despite millions of dollars school districts have received through PEP grants, the vast majority of physical educators in recipient districts aren't supporting members of either NASPE or their state professional associations. Where did they think these PEP funds came from? Did they think DC legislators awoke one day and collectively hit upon the same feel-good idea of gifting millions of dollars to physical education?

I recognize I'm mostly preaching to the choir. You're probably a member supporter of our profession. But if you're not, PLEASE think about it. During the economic recession we've all heard stories of program and position cuts. Thank goodness for the obesity crisis. Without it, we'd be in far more desperate professional straits. Lucky for us, groups and individuals outside of PE teaching are currently saving us from our own indifference. But it's a risky and high stakes game of chance that, like a house of cards, could crumble upon us at any time.

Amazingly, those who don't support our profession through professional membership and involvement are among the first to complain that we "don't get no respect." Why should we? Large class sizes, small equipment budgets, inadequate facilities, and unqualified teaching colleagues are the consequences of our political naiveté. It should be no surprise that school administrators pay us little regard when we so poorly advocate the benefits of what we do. In today's climate of increasing academic accountability we're probably fortunate it isn't worse.

And sadly, in the absence of change the future doesn't look much better. Few graduates of college physical education programs become member supporters of our profession. PETE faculty - at least if I am an example - do an abysmal job of motivating, persuading or cajoling students to see any role or responsibility beyond "gym" teaching and coaching. We must do a better job both with our teaching colleagues and with the future generation of physical educators to get them to truly embrace the notion of "professionalism."

Membership in and support for NASPE or our state associations isn't just about the publications. We've got to get beyond the "What do I get?" mentality. It's about determining our own future instead of relying on others. It's about accepting responsibility and quitting the whining. It's about becoming a TEAM player and achieving more rather than less. It's about recognizing the connection between sowing and reaping. Ultimately, it's about choice rather than chance. What's in your professional future? Apathy or action? It's up to you to decide.
